Parents Need Answer of North Carolina Missing Daughter

The recent news of the discovery of the remains belonging to Pamela Waldher brings an answer to the 2 year-old question, "Where is Pamela?" One area family waits daily for any information concerning their daughter, Susan Anderson.

On January 5, 2006 another young woman disappeared from home just a few miles from the wooded Ft. Bragg training area off Nursery Road in Harnett County. Susan Renee Andersen, 19, left her home she shared with her family to go to work and never returned. It has been over 18 months of heartbreaking silence; since the family of Susan Andersen is asking the same question, "Where is she?"

A missing persons report on Susan was filed on January 8, 2006 with the Harnett County Sheriff office. An investigator with the department, at that time said one of his deputies spoke via, a long distance phone call in May 2006 with a woman purporting to be Susan Andersen and closed the case. No information was available to the family, nor were they provided any proof of life of their daughter. None had been given since.

The CUE Center for Missing Persons became involved in this case June 26, 2007 at the request of the Andersen family. Because of the various circumstances surrounding the disappearance, and the passionate appeal of the family, the Harnett County Sheriff's Office reopened the case and have, as of yet, been unable to confirm proof of life.

To date no activity has shown Susan is working, no contact to her family and simply, she remains missing as far as we are concerned. Although adults may have the right to leave life, if you will, families still have the right to verify their well being, said CUE Founder, Monica Caison. We will continue to provide support to the family left behind and move forward to prove that this young woman is alive and well, she added.
